

The Dynamics of Religion & Democracy in Indonesia

Ms Alissa Wahid

director of the Gusdurian Network Indonesia

co-chair in the Executive Board of Nahdlatul Ulama

Religions often viewed as incompatible with democracy. Indonesia tells otherwise. As a country where religions are considered most important, Indonesia is the third largest democracy, Indonesia has been one of most stable democracy in the world. But it has never been an easy balance.

How does religions play their roles in Indonesian democracy? How is the dynamics between religion and democracy? What are the key factors that help maintain the healthy dynamics?